In this Guide

This research guide will help you find, and access patient records and records related to health practitioners in the Archives of Ontario collection.

*Note: All record descriptions mentioned in this guide are available in our online Archives and Information Management System (AIMS), unless noted otherwise. You will find the database in the "Access Our Collections" section of our website. Consult the "How do I get to the online descriptions" section at the end of the guide for more information.

The Records

Most of the patient records in the Archives of Ontario collection are from Psychiatric Hospitals, Tuberculosis hospitals, or Centres for Developmentally and Emotionally Disabled Individuals.

The Archives of Ontario also holds a variety of records from Physicians, Nurses, and other Healthcare practitioners. We have many historical collections of records created by physicians from the 1700s to the 1900s. We also hold lists and directories of physicians and healthcare providers, and records from some Ontario nursing schools.

Accessing Patient Records – Record Restrictions

Access to most patient files is restricted by the Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. Check the Restrictions on Access and How to order these records sections of a record group description for information on which restrictions apply.

In order to access restricted files, you must make a Freedom of Information request. You can find more information about the access request process in our guide to Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy, and you can find the access request form on this page.

You can generally access unrestricted patient records in the Archives of Ontario Reading Room by using our self-service microfilm or by contacting a reference archivist and requesting the relevant containers before your visit.

Patient Records

General Hospitals

The Archives has the records of Cornwall General Hospital. They include patient records. Click here to access the online description for the records of the Cornwall General Hospital (F 1396, 1897 to 1980).

NOTE: Patient records from other Ontario hospitals usually remain in the custody of the hospital.

Contact the hospital in question for information on accessing patient records.
 When hospitals close, they generally transfer their records to the succeeding institution. Please note that most older patient records have been destroyed.

The Archives also has operational records from the Wellesley Central Hospital. Click here to access the online description for the records of the Wellesley Central Hospital (F 4475, 1942 to 1999, predominant 1983 to 1998).

Private Hospitals

The Archives holds records from various privately owned hospitals that have been closed:

Click here to access the online description for patients' medical records from closed private hospitals (RG 10-232, 1949 to 2002).

Click here to access the online description for regional offices hospital and related programs operational records, which includes patient files (RG 10-386, 1965 to 2000).

Psychiatric Hospitals

Patient records from psychiatric hospitals may include case files, casebooks, admission registers and discharge registers.

Click on the name of a psychiatric hospital in the table below to access its record creator description. You can find a list of all record series created by the hospital at the bottom of the description page.

You can also access the record creator descriptions by searching our Archives and Information Management System (AIMS), "Archives Repository", Advance Search for patient records and other types of records, or an Organization Search for the name of the hospital. The Archives and Information Management System (AIMS), "Archives Repository" can be found in the "Accessing Our Collections" section of our website.

Records of Physicians, Nurses and Other Healthcare Practitioners

Physicians' Records

The Archives has the records of over 50 prominent Ontario physicians, ranging from the late 1700s to the late 1970s.

Our collections of physician records consist of physical records that can be accessed in the Archives of Ontario Reading Room. You should request the records a few business days in advance of your visit to the Archives, as they may be held in offsite storage.

If you are not able to visit the Archives of Ontario, you can use any available online listings to identify specific files that you are interested in receiving copies of. You can speak with a Reference Archivist to order copies of these files. For further information, click here to access our customer service guide 105 for information about our reproduction services and fees..

The table below lists the some of the physicians' records we hold. Click on the name of a collection to access the online archival description. This is not an exhaustive list. To search for other physicians' records in the Archives of Ontario collection, click here to access the Archives and Information Management System (AIMS), "Archives Repository", then search for the physician's name.
